

Stephen A. McClave, M.D.

Dr. McClave is a native of Columbus Ohio, though he has lived in Louisville, Kentucky and been on faculty at the University of Louisville, School of Medicine, for over 25 years. Dr. McClave received his M.D. from Ohio State University and completed his Internal Medicine Residency at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, South Carolina, and finally a Gastroenterology Fellowship at the University of South Florida in Tampa, Florida. Dr. McClave is Professor and Director of Clinical Nutrition at the University of Louisville School of Medicine and director of the Nutrition Curriculum for the Introduction to Clinical Medicine Course for the first and second year medical students.

He is a past chairman of the Medical Practice Section of ASPEN, served on its National Nutrition Week Planning Committee for four years, and was an Associate Editor for Nutrition in Clinical practice for that society. He was on the ASPEN Board of Directors for six years and is a Past-President of that group.

He is a diplomat and Past-President of the American Board of Physician Nutrition Specialists, and has remained on their board since. He was a member of the ASGE Task Force for Enteral Nutrition, and was the past Chairman of the ASGE Special Interest Group in Enteral Nutrition. He was awarded the Honorary Lifetime Membership of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics. He is a fellow of ASPEN, ACN, AGA, and the ASGE.

He is author to over 200 articles, book chapters, and medical educational videotapes. His research interests and clinical expertise involve critical care nutrition and early enteral feeding, guidelines for nutrition therapy, endoscopic techniques for enteral access, and indirect calorimetry.

Along with numerous academic interests, he has a healthy appreciation for a number of outdoor sports, enjoying running, biking, or skiing depending on where his travels take him.

Jan 2014